

Perfect Buttons

How to Design Them?

Anatomy of a Button

A button has six important parts. We need all of them to make a perfect button.

States

Create designs that work for every way people interact.

Size and Tap Area

Buttons should be big enough—around 44x44dp or 48x48dp—because our fingers need room to tap comfortably. So, don't make buttons too small.

Button Text

Button text should be clear and short, explaining what happens when you click it.

Colors

Always think about what colors mean. Like how red usually means stop, while green means go. Also, make sure the color of your buttons stands out against the text so everyone can easily see and use them.

Hierarchy

Focus more on the main things and don't let them get overshadowed by less important stuff.

Text Case

All caps are okay for short phrases, but for longer ones, title case is better.
